Our History

WHERE WE CAME FROM

The Sephardic Jewish Brotherhood of America is the largest Sephardic benevolent organization of its kind in the United States. Founded in 1916 by Jewish immigrants from Ottoman lands, the Brotherhood has worked to serve the most needy in our community and create a home for Sephardic Jews from around the world.

The organization began as a volunteer mutual aid and burial society, where membership dues were 10 cents per week at a time when laborers earned as little as $5 per week. During the 1920's and into the Great Depression, it created a secret fund - fundo secreto (now named the Henry J. Perahia Funds for the Needy) to help community members in need, and established a scholarship program for its members' children. It held night classes at its Sephardic Center for new English-language learners and assisted in job placement support for new immigrants to the United States. Along with other Jewish fraternal organizations, the Brotherhood was a founding member institution of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies (later reorganized as the UJA-Federation of New York). The Brotherhood also supported the creation of Sephardic synagogues in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Queens well into the 1950's and 1960's.

During World War II, it united the Sephardic communities in the United States to form a War Refugee Relief Committee to help Jewish Community members in Greece and the Balkans. In partnership with the Joint Distribution Committee, it helped hundreds of Sephardic Holocaust survivors reunite with their relatives in the United States after the war, and assisted with relocating Sephardic community members housed in Displaced Persons camps.

Over the years, other Sephardic community organizations that traced their ancestry from Istanbul, Rhodes, Izmir, Adrianople (Edirne), and other Mediterranean cities merged with the Brotherhood, serving to further unite our Sephardic community in the United States. In the 1960s and 70s, the Brotherhood ran a successful Sephardic youth program through its Sephardic Youth League, and was a founding member institution of the Sephardic Home for the Aged. Coupled with its advocacy for Sephardic rights and education in Israel, partnerships with major American Jewish institutions like Yeshiva University, and crisis relief for Jews in Turkey in the 1950s, the Brotherhood has played a historic role in Jewish affairs throughout the United States and around the world.
